TITLE IX PROTECTS EVERYONE Including Pregnant & Parenting Students

Questions Frequently Asked by Expectant Students

What if I need to miss class or cannot meet assignment deadlines due to pregnancy complications or the delivery?

The university does not have a specific policy regarding excused absences due to pregnancy or giving birth. Instead, the Office of Academic Advising regularly works with students who need to interrupt their academics due to pregnancy or who just need a bit of extra care to complete their work during the semester.

What happens to my Full-Time Student status if I cannot attend class regularly during a semester?

Title IX gives the student the opportunity to return to the same academic and extracurricular status as before her medical leave began. WFU offers that students who need to interrupt their “full- or part-time status for personal or medical reasons may petition for continuous enrollment status with the Office of Academic Advising.” The Registrar’s office also adds that “in the case of change to continuous enrollment status granted during an academic term for medical reasons, the student may request that no grades be recorded for that semester.”

What happens to my on-campus job if I miss extra work or take a semester off?

Student on-campus jobs should be discussed between the student and their employer and/or the Student Financial Aid office (the coordinators of student employment).

What happens to my Financial Aid or Scholarship if I cannot attend class regularly during a semester?

Students receiving student financial aid or scholarships through WFU and who are facing pregnancy leave during a semester must be counseled by the Scholarships & Financial Aid office immediately as this leave could potentially affect their financial aid status. Scholarships awarded by donors outside of WFU are not protected by Title IX, so the student must contact the donor to discuss options. If the donor is willing to work with the student, the SFA office must receive a written request from the donor with their instructions.

What happens to my On-Campus Housing once I deliver my child?

Although students in the past have lived on campus with children, they are currently not allowed to do so. On-campus residential requirements can be waived for students with children. Contact the Title IX Office for more information about rights and possibilities.
